The Indiana Chapter of the Society of Professional Journalists established the Indiana Journalism Hall of Fame in 1966 at DePauw University in Greencastle.

The purpose of the IJHF is to recognize those individuals who have deep connections to Indiana as a result of their personal backgrounds, including their upbringings, and/or their careers, and who have demonstrated over the years that they are journalists of highest distinction; that their dedication to journalism has enhanced the regard others have for the profession; that their work has been of outstanding public service; and their contributions to journalism have had a significant impact on the social, cultural, political and/or economic life of their communities.

The Hall of Fame moved to the Ernie Pyle School of Journalism in 2009 (merged into the Media School) at Indiana University/Bloomington. In 2023 the IJHF was pleased to be invited by Butler University's College of Communication in Indianapolis to move to the Fairbanks Center where are office and archives are now housed.

The Indiana Journalism Hall of Fame is a 501(c)3 tax exempt organization and appreciates the support of interested donors.
